DeLamar Site 2006

Discovery and Early History 1863 to 1876

Silver City occupies a flat area along Jordan Creek below War Eagle Mountain. This photograph was taken in the summer of 1868.

Placer Gold was discovered in Jordan Creek 1863 and from there followed upstream to Silver City where high-grade veins were found.

DeLamar and Florida Mountain 1876-1914

High grade veins at DeLamar and Florida Mountain discovered in 1889

DeLamar and Florida Mountain 1930-1999

- Mining properties in the DeLamar project area were largely inactive from 1942 until the mid-1960s.
- In 1977, Earth Resources commenced operation of the DeLamar silver-gold mine.
- In September of 1984, the NERCO Minerals Company Inc. purchased interest in the DeLamar project and became the operator of the joint venture.
- NERCO was purchased by the Kennecott Copper Corporation in 1993. Two months later in 1993, Kennecott sold its 100% interest in the DeLamar mine and property to Kinross.
- Kinross ceased exploration work in 1997 and mining was halted at the end of 1998 due to unfavorable metal prices.
- In 1999, milling ceased and Kinross placed the DeLamar mine on care and maintenance. Mine closure activities commenced in 2003.

Kinross Reclamation Activities

In 2004 a closure plan, a water management plan and five engineering design plans were submitted and approved.

Early Stakeholder Engagement in Mine Planning

CRACKING OPEN THAT CAN OF WORMS

Evolution of Stakeholder Engagement: Same Concepts, New Standards

DeLamar Town Site ca. 1890

Captain J.R. DeLamar, Founder of the DeLamar Mining Co., donated a $4,500 red brick schoolhouse to the town around this time.

ESG first coined in 2005

Accelerated in 2013-2014

Social License to Operate – Coined in 1997
(1 year before Kinross ceased operations at DeLamar)
